and then to the taxi in the foreground. The color, however, is also used for this purpose. Notice the light shade of the windows, the bright yellow and orange canvas awnings, and the people as well as the other taxis. All of these bright areas guide the eye from the left of the painting to the clock, which has bright, white faces, and on down to the waiting taxi.

Balance in Use of Colors

Another important area of color use is balance. Study the painting on page 14. There is one major accent color. If too many things in the painting were painted with the accent color, it would no longer be an accent. By using subdued colors around the accent color, attention is drawn to the building which is accented. The sky and grass colors are used very freely, not filling the entire area.

Mixing Colors

Mixing colors is a difficult skill. It takes a considerable amount of practice. You may have to do a painting many times before you are satisfied. Do not be satisfied too easily. Much effort, patience, and perseverance will produce quality work.

Assignment 8. Choose a street scene you like either from a magazine or in an encyclopedia. Draw the scene. Now you should select certain buildings or objects you would like to emphasize. Paint the surrounding areas in more subdued tones; then, use your accent colors on the selected objects.

Ask your Supervisor to check your work for this assignment, and if satisfied, to initial here: _____
